Nine NBPD Officers Promoted to New Ranks

New Brunswick, NJ August 13, 2015 - The leadership of the New Brunswick Police Department has been bolstered with the promotions of nine accomplished officers.

Surrounded by friends and family, the following officers took their oaths during a ceremony at New Brunswick High School on August 12:

- Det. Brandon Epstein to the rank of Sergeant
- Officer Mark Cichowski to the rank of Sergeant
- Sgt. William Oels, III to the rank of Lieutenant
- Sgt. Michael Yurkovic to the rank of Lieutenant
- Sgt. Amish Shah to the rank of Lieutenant
- Sgt. Raymond Trigg to the rank of Lieutenant
- Sgt. Daniel Dominguez to the rank of Lieutenant
- Sgt. John Doyle to the rank of Lieutenant
- Lt. Michael Bobadilla to the rank of Captain

“It is a privilege to be a New Brunswick Police Officer and a distinct honor to be selected as a supervisor,” said Police Director Anthony Caputo. “These men have proven themselves as leaders and are among the sharpest minds in our police department. They are all deserving of their respective promotions.”
Mayor Jim Cahill stressed the importance of strong leadership, especially in light of the 20 new officers that joined the department in the past year. An additional five will soon enter the police academy and begin their training.

“Our City deserves nothing but the best, and it is because of the caliber of the officers we employ and the dedication, commitment and professionalism of Director Caputo and our law enforcement leaders that our police department grows even stronger, more effective and better positioned to serve and protect our community,” Mayor Cahill said.

The City of New Brunswick, located in Middlesex County, is the county seat for Middlesex County.
